

SEEK VANDALS WHO DESECRATED ANTIOCH CHURCH

Marauders Shoot Out Glass
Panels at St. Peter's New Church

OFFERS $1,000 REWARD

A $1,000 reward was posted early yesterday by Rev. Father Daniel Frawley of St. Peter's church in Antioch for the apprehension of vandals who late Tuesday night shattered three lancet glass windows by the firing of shot guns.

Three shots were heard shortly after 11:30 o'clock, according to Barney Naber, who lives near the church. Lester Osmond saw an auto leaving from in front of the church at that time and believed the shots to be backfires from the motor.

The shattered windows were discovered yesterday at 7:30 o'clock when Father Frawley came into the church. Incensed at the vandalism, he immediately notified the sheriff's office and posted a reward of $1,000 for information leading to the arrest and conviction of these guilty.

"People of all races and creeds have always held church property sacred, and those guilty of this malicious desecration should receive drastic punishment," Father Frawley said, characterizing the act as an affront to the entire community, Catholic and Protestant alike.

Deputy Russell McBride started an investigation immediately after the matter had been reported to Sheriff Lester Tiffany. McBride visited Antioch early yesterday, to get all the information possible from residents here.

The dedication of altars and confirmation ceremonies which had been announced for last night have been postponed, until next Monday night with the altar dedication Tuesday morning.

While the actual damage done amounts to only about $150, it is said by church members that those who performed the malicious act believed that the new stained glass windows had been installed.

Channel Lake Girl Catches Hair In Saw; Dies Sunday

Anna Dunford, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Dunford of Channel Lake, passed away early Sunday morning, twelve hours after her hair had been caught in a buzz saw, detaching her scalp from her head.

She had been assisting her father and a neighbor saw wood Saturday, and had just thrown the last log into the saw, when she slipped toward the saw, and her long hair became caught in the shaft. Dr. Fletcher of Salem was called, but it was nearly three hours after accident before she was taken to the Lake County hospital, where she died the following morning.

A verdict of accidental death was returned by the coroner's jury at the inquest held here Sunday afternoon.

Anna Elizabeth Dunford was born on August 3, 1916. At the time of her death, she was a student in the eighth grade at the Channel Lake school.

She is survived by her parents, two sisters, Elsie and Florence, and four brothers, George, Clarence, Edward and Lawrence.

Funeral services were held yesterday afternoon at the Methodist church, her classmates serving as pallbearers. Burial was in the Liberty cemetery.

ALUMNI STILL FAST; DEFEATS H. S. 36-29

Eleven 90 Per Cent Pupils
Head Grade School
Honor Roll

The high school alumni basketball players downed the present school team by a score of 36-29, after a closely contested game which lasted for six quarters. The high school team was in the lead until the sixth quarter, when the Alumni, with a fresh burst of energy, swept into the lead. Maxine piled up the largest individual score on the Alumni, ten of the 36 points being made by him. Folbrink made four baskets, Sheehan and Willett each claimed three, Cremin, two, and Schwenk, one. Other Alumni players aided them by their floor-work.

Although the high school team was much lighter, they put up a skillful scrap. Fuchs led in the number of points, scoring ten points, while Brogan made five, O'Haver, Keulman and Turk each made four points, and Pacini, two.

The boys will play Lake Geneva Friday evening at Lake Geneva. This is the last preliminary game before the first conference game with Barrington on Dec. 12. In a practice game with the Wilmet Pirates, Monday evening, the locals were defeated 57-21.

Roads Slippery, Car Skids, Boys Late For School

Icy roads were the cause of an automobile accident in which no one was injured, late Sunday when the car in which Howard Masine, Lloyd Weisel and William Schwenk left the road six miles north of Joliet and ploughed into the ditch. The boys, students at Illinois Wesleyan, were enroute back to Bloomington after having spent the week-end here with relatives. The accident would not have been so bad had not another car piled in on top of theirs while the boys had gone to a nearby town for help.

After spending the night in Joliet, the boys proceeded to Bloomington the following morning where they probably had no trouble in being excused by the dean for their tardiness.

No Depression Here; Christmas Savings Go Into Hands of Shoppers

In spite of the so-called depression, those who a year ago made the wise decision to foster a Christmas savings account, today are enjoying the fruits and satisfaction of being well provided for at Yuletide.

This week Antioch banks paid out a total of nearly $10,000.00 to the savors, nearly 150 of them whose accumulations via the Christmas savings plan varied for an average of about $70 per account.

The local banks are again inviting men, women and children of the vicinity to join one of the clubs now forming for next year. You won't be sorry, bank officials say.

RT. 173 DEDICATION PARADE TO RUN ON SHARP SCHEDULE

Antioch Motorists to Meet at Richmond to Join Parade

Final plans for the dedication of route No. 173 on "Saunders Day", Monday, December 8th, at Harvard have been completed. The program will actually start at Caledonia at 12:00 o'clock noon. The following time schedule is planned for the parade:

The parade committee will leave Harvard at 11:00 o'clock, leaving a boy scout bugler and drummer in each town as they go through. The bugler and drummer will play ten minutes before the parade leaves that particular town to give the townspeople an opportunity to fall in line with the parade. Windshield banners will be furnished each car in the parade. The parade will be headed and policed by the state highway police.

Leave Caledonia 12:00—arrive Lebanon 3:10.

Leave Poplar Grove 12:20—arrive at Alden 3:30.

Leave Capron 12:45—arrive at Harvard 1:00.

Leave Chemung at 1:05.

Leave Harvard at 1:30.

Leave Alden at 1:50.

Leave Lebanon at 2:10.

Leave Richmond at 2:45.

Zion and Antioch will gather at Richmond so as to be ready to proceed with the combined parade at 2:45 p. m.

It will be necessary for each town to be ready with their part of the parade at the exact time that the parade arrives in their town.

Harvard's main street will be brilliantly lighted with extra lights for this occasion.

A great deal of enthusiasm has been displayed by the various towns along the route over prospective floats. From all that you hear there will be some mighty attractive floats. Besides that anyone, who wishes to, may enter the parade with their car.

The banquet hall at the Harvard Community High School will be attractively decorated. Souvenir programs, significant of the occasion, will be at each plate. The Harvard Community High School Band will furnish music during the meal.

The banquet committee announces the following menu:

Fruit Cocktail
Roast Beef and Brown Gravy
Shredded Potatoes
Buttered Green Beans
Lettuce Salad
Cranberry Conserve
Pickles
Parker House Rolls
Cherry Pie and Cheese
Coffee

The doors of the banquet hall will be open at 6:00 p. m. and because the program must and will be over with at 9:00 o'clock, the banquet will be served promptly at 6:30 p. m. Mr. Blake D. Bell will be master of ceremonies at the banquet. Governor Emmerson will appear at the banquet only, at which time he will give the dedication address. Other short talks will be enjoyed by the Honorable H. H. Cleveland, Director of Public Works and Buildings, Mr. F. T. Sheets, Superintendent of Highways, the Honorable Fred E. Sterling, Lieutenant Governor, and Mr. M. P. Walsh, Director of Registration and Education.

From all indications there will be a greater gathering of state officials at this banquet than in, perhaps, any other city, save Springfield, and besides the state officials, Jack Poorman, Department Commander of Illinois of the American Legion, officials of the Chicago Motor club, as well as the Motorists of Illinois, various Chamber of Commerce officials, city and county officials.

Arrangements have been made to take care of as many as desire tickets for the banquet. However, your reservations must be in by Friday, December 5th, in order to assure a place for you. If you haven't already ordered your tickets, call Harvard 367 at once and tickets will be reserved for you, which you may secure at the banquet hall on Monday night, December 8th. However, no tickets will be sold on that night, which have not been previously reserved.

Special parking arrangements have been provided at the high school and special police will protect the cars during the banquet.

This undoubtedly will be one of the biggest events in many years and Harvard is anxious that everyone,

Community Tree Will Bring Joy To Antioch Kiddies

A real Christmas tree with colored lights and laden with gifts of candles and nuts, and a real Santa Claus will again gladden the hearts of the community's kiddies at the Yuletide.

Herbert J. Vos, special ambassador for old Kris Kringle himself, has received a letter advising him of the glad news and requested Mr. Vos to pass along the news to the boys and girls here. The letter is from old Santa Claus, advising that he will be here on Christmas Eve, Dec. 21, at about 7:00 o'clock, with a full supply of candy, nuts, oranges and apples. He also told Mr. Vos in the letter that he would have a Christmas tree here and wanted him to have all the good children to the age of 12 years there to receive their presents.

For many years it has been Mr. Vos' pleasure to supply the community Christmas tree and furnish the gifts. This year, as usual, the Woman's club and the American Legion post are co-operating in erecting and lighting the tree and arranging a short program of songs for Christmas eve when the presents will be distributed.

The tree has been erected at the corner of Main and Orchard streets and in a few days the lights will be placed upon it.

PROCEDURE SIMPLE IN OBTAINING A DRIVER'S LICENSE

It is hoped that the proposed drivers' license law to come up before the next session of the legislature will be patterned after the existing law in several of the eastern states where accident fatalities have greatly decreased since the law was adopted.

New York's experience is typical. There the law is administered in the right way and New York City, in spite of the fact that it is the largest city in the United States and presents the most acute traffic problems, has been able to cut down its automotive death rate among the 12 largest cities of the United States.

The procedure in obtaining a license in New York state is interesting and it is hoped similar machinery may be adopted when the law is finally passed in this state. The steps are as follows:

Learner's sixty-day permit; a junior operator's license; an operator's license; and a chauffeur's license. When a person in the state first applies for a license upon paying a fee of ten cents he is given a Learner's permit.

The junior operator's license is issued to minors and restricted to daytime use only. It usually is awarded to children in rural districts who must use a car for transportation to and from school. No night driving or operation in restricted districts under any consideration is permitted on this license. The operator's license is awarded to the owner of a motor car or member of his family who desires to drive the car. The fee is $1.00. The chauffeur's license is for the operator who obtains his livelihood by driving a privately owned automobile, taxi, delivery car or truck.

Examination of applicants for licenses is left to the discretion of the Motor Vehicle Commissioner. First an eye test with a 20-10 rating is required. Color blindness, however, does not exclude the applicant. Next the driver is given an oral examination on the state traffic laws and is required to read. Then comes the road test. A person must be able to handle his car properly under all conditions.

At any time during the test if the physical or mental condition of the driver excites suspicion the examiner may at will demand a mental or physical examination.

The New York law also contains suspension and revocation clauses.

Fully 25 per cent of the applicants for licenses are rejected at the first examination in New York state. Many of these, after further training, pass a second examination and obtain licenses.

No ex-convict is licensed to drive a car until he has been out of prison as long as he served, and then only when he is recommended by the trial judge, prosecuting attorney and prison warden.

No person is permitted a license who is suffering from extremely poor eyesight, no matter what the excuse for wanting to use a car. All drivers must be physically and mentally equipped to act in emergencies.

Constant offenders although their actions do not prove fatal, are ruled off the road. No person can obtain a license who has used an automobile in the commission of crime. Repeated violation of the speed laws means suspension and probably a revocation for all time of a license.

Such is the procedure in New York and it is hoped that our legislature will see its way to adopt a strong law patterned after the act as it is administered there and in several other eastern cities.

It is interesting to note that a recent study of the experience of nine states which have strong drivers' license laws shows that there have been 29 per cent fewer motor vehicle fatalities than there would have been had these states experienced the same increase as non-license states. The saving amounted in all to 22,000 lives.

BIGGER AND BETTER

THE NEW CHEVROLET SIX

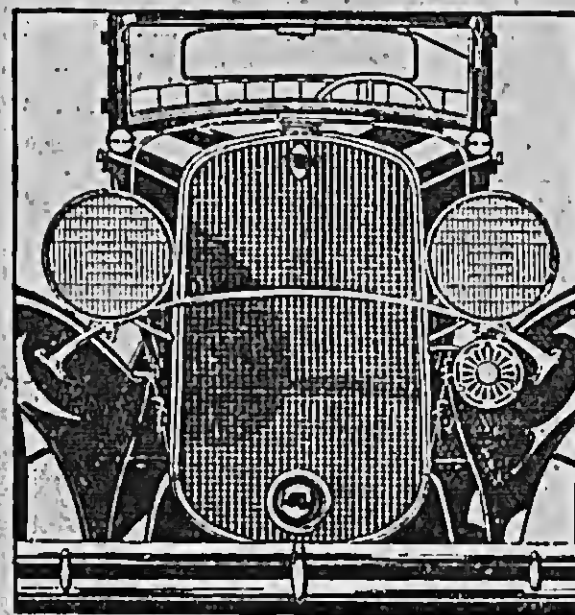

*Strikingly beautiful, fleet and smart
—a masterpiece of Fisher styling*

In the entire field of modern coachcraft no symbol has come to mean more to the buyer of a motor car than Body by Fisher. And never has Fisher's superiority been more strikingly exemplified than in the beautiful new bodies of the Bigger and Better Chevrolet Six!

Working with the added advantage of a lengthened wheelbase, Fisher designers have been able to achieve in the new Chevrolet a degree of smartness, comfort and impressiveness hitherto considered exclusive to cars far higher in price.

Inside and out, you will discover scores of refinements that stamp this car as a masterpiece of modern coachwork. Radiator, headlamps and tie-bar have been artistically grouped to create an unusually attractive and distinctive ensemble. Mouldings sweep back from the graceful new radiator in an unbroken line to blend with the smart new body contours. And new colors, in carefully devised combinations, lend a new individuality.

Front view of the new Chevrolet Sport Coupe

Interiors, too, are exceptional in every way. The new mohair and broadcloth upholstery is tailored with exceptional smartness. Seats are wider and deeper and more luxuriously cushioned. A deeper windshield and wider windows give better vision for both driver and passengers. And beautiful new hardware, of modern design, lends a final note of charm.

The greater quality and beauty of the new Chevrolet-Fisher bodies have a counterpart in the many improvements which have been provided in the chassis of this Bigger and Better Six. Among these improvements are a longer, deeper, stronger frame; easier steering; a more durable clutch; a quieter, smoother-shifting transmission; and engine refinements which make the new Chevrolet a car you will be happy to drive—as well as proud to own.

The Bigger and Better Chevrolet Six is now on display in our showrooms. See it today—drive it—and learn for yourself that it is the Great American Value!

IF IT'S INDIVIDUALITY YOU WANT
... MAY WE SUGGEST LAMPS

LAMPS make ideal Christmas gifts because they're so individualistic and so useful. Even "people who have everything" can find a place for a charming new lamp. There are lamps for every room in the house, both floor and table models, now on display at your Public Service Store and most of them will harmonize nicely with the smallest of gift budgets, either purchased outright or the "Little by Little" way with a small down payment.

There are attractive little lamps for the occasional table in the living room in colonial designs and others with gay pottery bases and parchment shades. There is a brass lamp with decorated parchment shade as low as $2.25.

Boudoir sticks for the dressing table will give a dainty feminine touch to the most matter-of-fact bedrooms. Bedside lamps, also, are ornamental and useful. These are priced as low as $1.

At your Public Service Store you'll find desk lamps for business men, student lamps for young people away at school, reflector lamps for indirect lighting, smoking stand lamps for men who smoke as they read, little lamps that clip on to books—and ever-so-many other kinds. Why not shop now for your Christmas gift lamps while displays are at their best.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

"Ancient and Modern Neeromancy, alias Mesmerism and Hypnotism, Demanded" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, November 30.

The Golden Text was, "He not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good" (Romans 12:21).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "Put on the whole armour of God, that ye may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil, for we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places" (Ephesians 6:11, 12).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "We say that one human mind can influence another and in this way affect the body, but we rarely remember that we govern our own bodies" (p. 402).

Father of Postage Stamp
It is not generally known that a blind man gave the world its postage stamp, says an article in Popular Science Monthly. In 1840, Sir Rowland Hill, head of Great Britain's postal service, suggested the idea which has since spread to all parts of the globe. The first American stamp appeared in 1847 and bore the portrait of Benjamin Franklin.

county association, "tuberculosis still claims its heaviest toll among those between 15 and 45 years of age—the age of greatest economic importance. The money raised by the sale of Christmas seals is used to discover unknown cases of tuberculosis, to help them get treatment, to aid sufferers to know they have the disease, and to tell the general public how to prevent tuberculosis and other communicable diseases."

"To do this an extensive program of education is necessary. During the past year, your Association has examined over twenty-three hundred school children throughout Lake county, and has given thorough chest examinations to nearly two hundred fifty patients at the monthly chest clinics. Nine hundred homes were visited, and a number of needy children sent to summer camps or convalescent homes. This year the Association has added a Dental Hygienist to the staff of workers. She is making dental examinations in the rural schools and will follow up her work with dental educational talks and corrections."

"What the Armistice Means in Germany"

By Hans von Helwede
(Conclusion)

I was 14 when the war began, a happy schoolboy, respected by my fellow-students, some of the teachers and beloved by my mother. After the first months of excitement, the dead silence of Germany affected us, we grew up to think of means of helping, of making ourselves valuable, to relieve our country, to amount to something. We went to bed hungry, sympathizing with all the unfortunate families, whose sons or fathers died in France. Thus it happened that we became very self-conscious that our destination was to save Germany. How proud I was to assist on my 17th birthday! What did I become? A soldier, a number, weighing 145 pounds, able to attend to war machine, capable of using my own mind because of my education.

Consequently I was transferred to shocktroops. The training I underwent rendered me numb, as I had felt in the hospital. My own experiences were horrible, and the only happiness was to enjoy the friendship of my devoted splendid comrades, so I grew contented, even when I was starved, when my feet were aching from the 20 mile daily marches, when my best friend was relieved of it all. How we did enjoy a poor doughboy, who, blown to pieces, must have had a wonderful death. We were convinced that a hero's death on the battlefield was the highest joy, for living in the trenches, getting shot without being killed, meant despair, a lonesome pain.

Now all this was at an end, we could live again, could once more enjoy the carefree life of school days, could respect and work to be respected. It was a glorious feeling and all Germany rose to its feet to work and rebuild their country. I am certain that Germany has not suffered in vain and now regard the World War as a lesson to live for humanity.

NEWS NOTES

This past summer a great many milk producers in Lake county, as well as all the Chicago fluid milk territory, were shut off the market temporarily because of low testing milk.

In a study made by H. C. Glickerson in connection with the Pure Milk Association it was found that over 30% of the herds in the Pure Milk territory test 3.2% or below. This means that there are many low testing cows in the territory which should be eliminated.

One McHenry county dairyman with a herd of 19 cows had seven of them test 2.9% or below in November.

Mail Order Milk Testing
As a rule, the low testers are low profit makers.

Kane County Farm Bureau, under the direction of H. P. Kelley, Farm Adviser, and Lake County Farm Bureau, under the direction of H. C. Glickerson, Farm Adviser, are planning to put on county-wide drives to call out those low testers through a mail order testing plan.

They have studied the thirteen counties now operating Mail Order Milk Testing units successfully in Wisconsin and are ready to submit the plan to the dairymen of the two counties at meetings in December.

The milk producer will be required to own an accurate milk scale. The Tester, located at the Farm Bureau office, will send out to the producer a box containing sample cans, record sheets, return envelope, return sticker for box, all stamped, for the farmer to weigh and sample the milk and return the samples and weight sheets to the laboratory at the Farm Bureau office, where it will be tested, calculated, and the report returned to the producer.

The cost is figured at a minimum which is $15.00 for ten cows or less and one dollar additional for each cow over ten.

Much interest has been expressed concerning this new system, as it will enable the dairymen to eliminate their low producers and help increase the net profit.

The Dairy Department of the University of Illinois issued a report from a study of 7163 cows in the Herd Improvement Association in 1928 and 1927 and it was found that it took 67 cows producing 129 pounds of butterfat to make a net profit above feed cost of $2,032.00, while it took 13 cows producing 385 pounds of butter fat to make a net profit above feed cost of $2,030.00.

"The Patsy" To Be Presented At H. S. Monday Night

The Senior play, "The Patsy", will be presented at the high school auditorium Monday evening, under the direction of Miss Lillian Schroeder.

This play, written by Harry Cop-nora, is one of the prettiest and most popular of the past few years. The scene is laid in any medium sized village, in the present day. The story concerns Patricia Harrington, a girl who "runs second" to her older sister. She is the Patsy who is blamed whenever anything goes wrong, and is forced to remain in the background in order that her sister may be presented to advantage.

Patsy, in her effort to become popular, finds a means which she believes will prove effective and which results in ludicrous scenes. Her father, a traveling man, is on her side, and finally declares his independence by putting Ma in her place. This brings out an entirely different situation, and the play rolls merrily on, full of laughter and fun.

The Senior play is an annual event, usually being presented the first week in December. It never fails to draw a crowd which overflows into the corridors, and arrangements are being made to sent as many this year.

HintsTHE LAST TRACE
OF MR. TURKEY
CAN BE REMOVEDMeat, Gravy or Grease
Stains Can Be Erased
Effectively

Experiencing the Thanksgiving aftermath of a new bare cupboard and a week's mending patiently or impatiently awaiting your "spare" moments? Or perhaps there is another heap of clothing, which requires more than washing or mending—a suit on which Junior dumped his Turkey dressing, or a frock soiled by baby's too eager haste in conveying a spoon of potato and gravy to her mouth?

Never mind, when the little garments are all sparklingly clean again, then you can think only of their owners' happiness in the feast. Stains from meat juice or gravy are similar to those from blood, and so boiling water should not be used at first, as it sets the stain. If material is washable, soak or rub them in cold or lukewarm water to remove the protein, until the stains turn light brown. Then wash in hot water. For stains on silk or wool, sponge with cold or lukewarm water.

Other Methods

Another method is to soak in a solution containing about two tablespoons of household ammonia to one gallon of water, until the stains are loosened. Then wash in the usual manner. For old stains ammonia is somewhat more satisfactory than soap.

Sponging with a little hydrogen peroxide, made slightly alkaline with ammonia solution, will often remove the last stains after the main part has been removed by the cold water. Apply this carefully, and rinse thoroughly afterwards.

Raw starch mixed to a paste with cold water may be used for stains on thick materials, such as flannel and blankets. Apply thickly, and brush away when it dries. Repeat until stain is removed.

If grease spots still remain, wash in soap and warm water, using a naphtha or kerosene soap. Stains from fine materials can be removed by the use of absorbents such as blotting paper, brown paper, powdered magnesia or white talcum powder. Corn meal or salt is effective on carpets to remove grease stains.

THE PIMPLES WILL GET YOU IF YOU
DON'T WATCH OUT!

A warning—don't groan, please! There are few to whom this does not apply, but if you are among those favored, you needn't read further. It is a respected Thanksgiving custom to load the board until it groans. The results? That depends on the individual—one may feel just "loggy", another gain a pound or two, and still another emerge from the Thanksgiving, or later, Christmas feasting, with a perfectly wretched complexion.

A shallow complexion requires more than just creams to make it clear, especially after heavy eating. A daily bath and rubdown, with orange or lemon juice before breakfast, and plenty of other fruits and vegetables added to fresh air and exercise keeps the whole system toned up to offset the winter holiday occasions.

Suggestions To
The Gift Maker

December! Nearly Christmas time, and surely not too soon to be thinking about gifts. And you must do more than just think about those gifts that you make with your own hands.

What can you make that's new? That's just the problem. The most common fancy-work gift, undoubtedly, is the pillow. They are nice, too, and everyone likes them, because they are useful as well as ornamental and can be kept for a long time to remind the possessor of the giver.

If you have a flock of nieces and tiny nephews, why not start a Noah's Ark? Or a semi-Noah's Ark would add more variety to the menagerie. With paper or rags for stuffing, gay colored figured cloth and buttons or thread for the facial expressions, really clever animals or dolls can be evolved.

If you are fortunate to have acquired that old-fashioned art of knitting, there are any number of things that you can make for gifts. If you have the time—scarfs, purses, mittens, socks, etc.

A gift that would be very welcome to most mothers, and one which would not necessarily require much work, would be a pair of hand-embroidered pillow cases. Handkerchiefs, pajamas, lingerie of all kinds which is hand made is always appreciated.

If your talents lie in the direction of painting or beadwork, hand-painted china, silk scarfs or handkerchiefs, or bead-trimmed purses will have increased value to your friends because you yourself have made them.

TOPPY'S TRAVELS

Synopsis: Toppo leaves his home to follow his canary, Linay, who flies away. After many adventures, he is captured by the Pillows, enemies of his Cloud-Queen, whom he tried to save. His sword, however, is hidden from the enemy. Toppo's guard, who is locked in with him, through the loyalty of Toppo's friend, Mr. Frog, tells him of a way to find the way home. If ever he escapes. Continue—

After Toppo had thanked the guard for telling him how to find the way home, the guard looked at him woe-factly, and said, "If we're going to starve here, we might just as well be friends."

"That's fine!" agreed Toppo. "But we need not starve. If you do as I say."

"No, I dare not let you out, or the Queen's advisors will surely torture me by starvation, then," the guard objected.

"Your Queen's advisors need not know anything about it. All I want to do right now is to keep from starving. Listen to this! Unlock me from my chains, and then I'll call Mr. Frog and he will bring us something to eat. He can't bring us anything, now, you know, because you are stronger than he is, and if he opened the door, you would push him in here, and escape, wouldn't you?"

"Why, of course," said the guard. "And so will you."

"I know it," said Toppo, smiling, "but I promise that we would feed you."

"How do I know that you would keep the promise?" the guard asked doubtfully.

"You just have to take our word for it, or starve," answered Toppo simply.

Seeing the fear in the guard's eyes, Toppo asked, "You're more afraid of what will happen to you if the Queen finds it out, than that we will not keep our promise, aren't you?"

"Yes." The guard shivered. "But they cannot reach you, for we will have the key."

"I know it, but then you would conquer my Queen and her people, and I would be to blame."

Toppo could have cried with vexation, when he realized that all his arguments had been in vain. However, he said to the guard, "Well, I like you anyway, because you are so loyal to your Queen, and if I ever do get out of here, I'll give you something to eat, anyway."

The guard hesitated. "Thank you," he said humbly. Then seeing Toppo wince with pain, as one of the chains hurt him, he whispered in a seared voice, "If I unlock the chains around your head and arms, can you rest better?"

"Oh, yes," breathed Toppo. So the guard unlocked all the chains except those blinding Toppo's ankles.

"I never thought that a pillow could be so kind, but you surely are a fine pal," Toppo told him.

"It's because I have suffered more than most of the Pillows, and so I know what pain is like," explained the guard. "I was never strong enough, to be a warrior, so the Queen's advisors said that I must be a guard."

"But doesn't a guard have to be strong? Toppo wanted to know. "They do in our country." "No, they need not be strong here, because the soldiers always lock a prisoner in his cell, and our locks and chains are so strong that they almost never escape. The only danger is when every enemy is not captured, as was the case of Mr. Frog."

"I hear footstep!" exclaimed Toppo. "I wonder if it is someone to help you or me?"

So the two prisoners, made friends through misfortune, anxiously waited to know who the newcomer would be.

SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER I—Renewing a childish attachment, Ernestine Bricefield, of a wealthy Chicago family, is fraudulently attracted by Will Todd, youthful newspaper artist, son of a not particularly well-to-do banker. Lillian, more of the conventional type, and aware of the attitude their father would take toward his daughter's marriage to an impetuous youth, urges Ernestine to end the affair, but the latter, capable of a passionate attachment, and realizing that in Will Todd she has found her affinity, refuses.

CHAPTER II—The love-making progresses swiftly, and finally, largely because of Ernestine's urging, they make a "runaway" marriage. Bricefield is infuriated but helpless, Ernestine being of age, and after a stormy scene the girl, with her husband, leaves her parents' home. Loring Hamilton, wealthy young lawyer, long Lillian's suitor, since her consent to be his wife, is disappointed.

CHAPTER III—The bride night is spent at Will's home, and next day they begin their married life in a single room in a humble neighborhood. Ernestine realizes the difference her marriage has made in her social sphere, but, secure in her love, faces the future bravely.

CHAPTER IV—John Poole, Will's best friend, successful though dissipated artist, gives a birthday party for Ernestine at Ruby Pastano's, a hemline resort on the fringe of the underworld. Pastano, notorious as a bootlegger and gambler, irritates Ernestine by his criticism of Will for bringing his young wife to such a place. Appealing to Will to take her home, he delegates the task to a friend, Tommy Tucker, explaining that he must see Poole, who has drunk too much, to his home. Ernestine is hurt and indignant. The situation is saved by the appearance of Loring and Lillian, who had heard of her whereabouts and with whom she leaves the party.

CHAPTER V—Approaching him for leaving her "unprotected" in his care, for Poole, Will takes an attitude which awakens Ernestine to the realities of her new life. She is conscious of approaching motherhood, and in anticipation of the event, opens a small savings account.

CHAPTER VI—Lillian's father, dies suddenly. A suggestion that the funeral be held from the Bricefield home, the Todd house being small, meets with refusal, to Ernestine's deep pain. Though her father attends the obsequies, he offers Ernestine financial aid, which she declines, in loyalty to Will. Pastano brings his wife on a visit of consolation, and Ernestine is touched by their friendliness. The shock of her husband's death, taken by the elder Mrs. Todd a hopeless invalid, Lillian and Loring are married.

CHAPTER VII—Will's mother dies almost immediately after the birth of Ernestine's baby. The couple live in the Todd house. Loring announces his intention of "going into" politics, in association with Pastano, with whom he has formed a friendship. He is eager for wealth. Changes in Will's office fail to bring him advancement, and Ernestine is looking forward to motherhood.

CHAPTER VIII—Pastano acquires a home at Langley lake, aristocratic resort, where the Bricefields have a cottage. Loring and Will quarrel bitterly, apparently over John Poole, and the sisters, loyal to both their husbands, feel separated. Will, discharging an office rule is discharged. Poole, indignant, renounces Ernestine's services, and her approaching motherhood, affects her health. On a trip to the bank she faints in the street.

CHAPTER IX

Loring Finds Ernestine

It was nine o'clock when Lillian reached Chicago from Langley lake in obedience to Loring's frantic telephone call. She turned the car into Erie street, as Loring had instructed her, and stopped before Mrs. Bennett's door, her hands falling from the wheel of the car with nervous weariness. She went up the stairs quickly, her heart full of repressed terror for Ernestine. She could not imagine what might have happened to her. Loring had been brief and unsatisfactory over long distance.

The door was opened by a colored maid who stared in silence.

"Is Mrs. Bennett in? I'm Mrs. Todd's sister. They told me to come here."

"The girl gave a squawk and threw her hand up over her mouth and rolled her eyes at Lillian."

"Can you tell me where Mrs. Todd is?" asked Lillian sharply.

"Lard, Miss. Will's end. Nobody knows. But you better c-min and talk."

Know. We Can't Find Her.

to Mrs. Bennett. She kin tell you the facts."

Trembling, seized Lillian, but she followed the girl in silence to Mrs. Bennett's sitting room, and in a moment found herself confronted by a plump, little woman whose face was gray and ravaged. Lillian looked at her with pleading eyes, afraid to trust her voice. Her throat was dry and closed.

"Please—where is she? What has happened?"

"We don't know. We can't find her."

"Tell me—please."

"She's not been well—you know of course that she was expecting another confinement?"

Lillian nodded, realizing that she was ignorant of the date.

"Well, since Will's been out of work, she's not been well."

"Will out of work? I didn't know that."

"Her heart was shaken with remorse. Will out of work, and Ernestine ill, and she had known nothing of it—playing bridge and golf and swimming at the lake."

"But where did she go? Who was with her last? What happened?"

Mrs. Bennett tried to be coherent.

"She left her little boy with a neighbor and went out alone, early in the afternoon. Evidently she intended to go to the bank, for Will found her blackbook lying on the table. We can't find out whether she was at the bank or not. No one noticed her, and she did not withdraw any money. But she came home about four, I was out and she left, but the maid said she looked as though she were going to drop then. That's the last that's been seen of her. Will got home about three, and he began to worry because Ernestine had not told him she was going out, and it was so hot, and she's not been well. He decided to come over here to the bank, and when he found that she hadn't been there, he went to your mother's. Ernestine wasn't there. Then Will came here, and Mr. Hamilton met him here. I phoned to Mrs. Schluss for them, but Ernestine wasn't at home yet."

"Wherever she was she would have come home to Peter, as Will argued, and I agreed with him. Will was nearly distracted—the men quarreled bitterly, and Mr. Hamilton called up Ruby Pastano and the papers, and organized a search—of course, people in the city go off and are delayed and don't get home on time. But, you see, now it's nearly ten and we haven't heard anything of her. Mr. Hamilton has notified the police. They'll find her—unless—"

"What do you mean?" cried Lillian sharply. Her hands were shaking so that she could scarcely hold her purse and gloves.

"Well—your husband—Mr. Hamilton, he's got the idea that she may have destroyed herself. But Will says no—she wouldn't do that."

"Will is right. Ernestine wouldn't do such a thing."

"But pregnant women get wonderful queer notions in their heads," insisted Mrs. Bennett dolefully. "Mr. Hamilton was nearly wild. He told Will that he had killed Ernestine—it seemed hard for Will to hear, but he brushed it away like nothing." She paused.

"Mr. Hamilton's got a taxi for us out there—had it since six o'clock. I don't know how much this'll cost him."

"That doesn't matter," said Lillian impatiently, and tried to control her perturbation. She was disturbed anew in the thought of Loring's violent, uncontrolled—she had never seen him so, except on the other occasion of his quarrel with Will. But this was worse. He had always been so fond of Ernestine—as though she were his own little sister. She felt a great relief to think that he had taken charge of the search. He would find Ernestine if she were to be found.

But the thought of her sister out in those hot streets, lost, ill and alone, caused her such anguish that she could scarcely breathe. What would mamma say to her? Mamma loved Ernestine the better—always had. Mamma had really left Ernestine to her.

The door was flung open and Loring stood there. His eyes were glittering with fear or fever. He looked at her as if he scarcely knew her.

"Lillian!" he exclaimed.

"I drove," he told him, "all the way. I've been so worried."

"You had cause to worry," he said grimly. "When we had Ernestine she is going home with us—to stay. Don't you agree? She's got to have somebody to take care of her."

"Of course, Loring."

"I've news of a sort," he said slowly, and they stared at him. "I don't know what it's worth. There was a woman taken to the County hospital this afternoon—from this neighborhood. She was a young woman, and she was to be confined. It might have been Ernestine. I've sent Will out there, and I came by to see if you were here—to his wife—and to wait here for a phone call."

The telephone shrilled, and the sound leaped through them all. Mrs. Bennett picked up the receiver with a trembling hand, while they all watched her in straining silence.

"Yes—yes—this is Mrs. Bennett. . . . Oh, he did. . . . Oh, thank you. Her sister is here. I'll tell them."

She turned from the phone.

"It's the hospital office. Will has identified Ernestine, and he's there with her. Oh, Mr. Hamilton—you found her!"

"Get your hat," said Loring. "And come with us. Never mind your keys. Lillian. We'll take the taxi."

At the hospital an interne was very businesslike.

"Her husband has identified her. Yes, he is with her now. No, you can't come in—well, only for a moment."

There lay Ernestine in the stiff, long-sleeved hospital shirt, her hair black between her white face and the white pillow, a nurse beside her counting her respirations, Will crouching there, his face against the covers. Her eyes were opened, flushed with fever. She was talking—pleading—in delirium. Ernestine, the darling sister—in this dreadful place!

"You will all have to go," said the nurse, snapping shut her old-fashioned watch and darting a resentful look at the interne. "We cannot have anybody in this ward after hours. Mr. Todd, you will have to go."

"Ernestine," cried Lillian, and Ernestine said quickly:

"Will's coming. I tell you my name is Bricefield B-r-i-c-e-f-i-e-l-d—I think there's more. The bus ran over me—it leaped at me—"

"She was crushed?" exclaimed Lillian, and the nurse said:

"No—she's just delirious. Please go."

"Can't we have her moved to a private room? Can't we move her?" It was Loring now.

Will had lifted his face, and he stared at Ernestine and gently smoothed her cheek, while her bright eyes turned on him.

"Papa—you must find Will—he'll worry," she urged him.

"I can't say about moving her. You'll have to see the floor doctor. She is very ill, he'll be moved—please leave the ward now."

The nurse was definite. Training and authority were behind her, and they withdrew. Even Will had to leave her, but Ernestine made such an outcry that the nurse permitted him to come back until Loring should make arrangements to move Ernestine.

Lillian found herself in a tiny reception room furnished barely. Loring had gone to the office, Mrs. Bennett to the phone booth downstairs. For a moment Lillian thought she was going to be sick. She clung desperately to the arms of the chair. She was the only woman in the room. A black man stood near her, twisting a cloth cup in his hands, his lips moving soundlessly. There was another man, shabby, unclean, suffering in patient silence, and they were joined by a third and then a fourth vague quiet figure.

Lillian's feelings were not of pity but revulsion. She could not bear it—Ernestine here with the scum of the earth—mamma's baby—their beauty—in this place that smelled of lysol, that was full of the sounds of sickness and suffering, as purgatory is full of groans. "This place was hell, it was nightmare. There came from the streets the clang of an ambulance—and a stretcher moved in the hall. Loring was beside her, beckoning."

"We are taking her to the Presbyterian hospital. They'll have a room and a nurse for her when we get there. Also a good doctor."

Lillian followed him in confusion. The ambulance she had heard was for Ernestine. The taxi threaded after it through the streets, and again there was delay. Mrs. Bennett left them to go back home. Will was with Ernestine and the stretcher. But now, at last, a small freshly painted room, as clean as a scalded dish, a high parlor bed, by an open window, an electric fan on a white dressing table, a chair or two, and a graduate nurse, capable, cool. There was a doctor, too.

Lillian stood just inside the door. The doctor was silent for a long time, examining Ernestine, reading the copy of the chart that had been sent with her.

"Gremes—and some albumen," he said as though any of them knew what he meant. "The baby will be premature—if we can get her through her confinement now swiftly, she'll be all right. When did you say she was expected?"

Will named the date. The doctor nodded with satisfaction as though his worst fears were confirmed.

"Well, it's a nasty case," he said, "but perhaps we shall pull her through, Miss Nana"—he turned to the nurse with a rapid fire of instructions and requests, and laid his coat aside.

"Now—there's nothing any of you can do but give us elbow room and quiet. She's already had two convulsions. When the next comes we shall be ready for her." The word "horrid" shot through Lillian's mind like a sword thrust. No—no—only idiot children—only diseased and terrible people—only the poor and helpless were so afflicted. Not Ernestine—oh, God—not Ernestine!

The doctor put them out with deliberate firmness, allowing Will to stay.

"If you go across the street, there's a nice little hotel there. Tell the clerk I sent you, and go to bed. Miss Nana will call you if there's any change, or if she's delivered. The battle is ours, now."

Lillian knew that it was as hard for Loring as it was for her to accept this dismissal and leave Will behind. Will was so futile! He would have left her in that other dreadful place.

In silence they crossed the street, registered at the hotel, and were assigned a room. They moved about in silent misery, looking out of the windows at the walls of the hospital.

"Did you know Will lost his job?"

Loring hesitated. "Yes," he said at last. "I know it."

"That why—"

"I didn't know how Ernestine would take it, if I hinted it. I thought she would let us know if she needed us."

"You know how proud she is—"

Loring moved restlessly. "I think I'll go back to the hospital. You stay here. No need for both of us to go. I'll call you if you're needed."

Wearily and confused, Lillian took off her clothes, bathed in the tiny bathroom and lay down across the bed, partly dressed again. Her whole thought was strained at first toward the hospital and the possible issue of Ernestine's illness. Then her thoughts turned and turned, from Loring to Ernestine, to Will, to mamma and papa and Ernestine and back to mamma again. Mamma had allowed papa and Loring to dictate to her about Will's father. That had really separated Ernestine from them long ago. They had offered Ernestine their love and help only at the price of betrayal of her marriage. Tears came to Lillian, and eventually, tired and sad, she fell asleep.

Daylight streaming over her bed awakened her. She rose, dressed, went across to the hospital and asked for Will, wondering as she did so whether or not she should have asked for Loring.

Will came to her in the reception room, looking at her from dull heavy eyes, silent, waiting.

"How is Ernestine, Will?" she asked him softly.

"She is still very ill," he answered, and added as an afterthought: "The baby is a girl."

He was exhausted, unshaved, sad and awry. As he stood there looking vaguely about him he seemed to Lillian the most forlorn and helpless human being she had ever seen. She pitied him, but he vexed her.

"Oh, Will," she said impulsively, "you shouldn't have allowed Ernestine to have this other baby—so soon, when you weren't prepared. You should have protected her." He averted his face, but she saw his flush.

"I've got to go back upstairs," he said, and added, as he turned to the door, "Loring has already lectured me on birth control. He's left the hospital. You must have missed him."

Lillian was ashamed. She had not intended to say such a thing. It was none of their business, really. At the hotel she stopped at the desk for the key, but Loring had it. She went up in the quiet elevator. When she opened the unlocked door of their room and went in, Loring was lying back in a chair by the open window, his hat on the floor beside him, his collar and tie lying on it. He was staring straight before him, and when Lillian came to his side he looked up at her with a piteous expression.

For a moment, standing there, a dart of such pain went through Lillian that she cried out. "This was what Ernestine could do to Loring. She knew, with a gripping pang of conviction, that nothing that could ever happen to her would cause him such anguish—such rout. This was what Will meant when he said that he knew what was the matter with Loring! She felt on her knees beside him, sobbing, and laid her face upon his knee. His hand fell on her shoulder. He mistook her fear and pain.

"She'll be all right, Lillian," he whispered. "Get going! The doctor said that a day or two will tell. It's uremic poisoning."

He sat forward in his chair, and his clenched hand fell on one knee, while the other arm held her convulsively.

"Thank God you weren't there. Thank God you will never know how she suffered. Will fainted once, and the nurse brought me into the room. They were fighting death like a physical foe. I helped to hold her—" He gave a stifled cry and tore the buttons from his shirt as he expanded his lungs against the crushing fear that lay upon him.

"Oh, Lillian," he cried to his wife, "I don't see how she can live—after last night. The doctor thinks she will, and so does Doctor Grey. He's with her now. But I don't see how she can survive that struggle. But one thing is settled for us, for ever." He pulled her tear-wet face up from his knee, and looked at her with blazing eyes. "You and I will have to be enough. No child is worth such anguish. No life is worth—death. No children—for us."

She hid her face against him. Her arms held him close.

"I don't care, if only you will love me."

He pressed her to him but his eyes had flown to the windows of the hospital, and she felt a tremor pass through his big frame.

A Word About FORD

BRAKES

Because of the "40-60" ratio between the front and rear brakes of your "Model A" Ford, the rear linings wear faster than the front. This distribution of braking effort assures good steering control because the front wheels will still revolve, allowing the car to be steered, even though the rear wheel brakes are locked and the wheels slide.

Better let us go over the braking system of your "Model A" before you lose this advantage to which you are entitled.
